nodeJS

What?

An informal event for developers interested in node.js to socialize, learn, create, have fun, share, network... The organizers provide only basic infrastructure: rooms, chairs, tables, internet and food.

The event itself will be a product of the participants ... though we may cheat a bit and will have a handful of interesting speakers on hand.

Where?

Coworking Cologne is collaborative working space located centrally in Cologne, Germany. It's home to a number of freelancers in the region, numerous tech user groups, among them Cologne's Javascript meetup, the region's first FabLab DingFabrik and numerous other creative endeavors.

It's located centrally in region as well and is well accessible from many European locations.

Similiar events have taken successfully taken place here in the past such as last summer's Railscamp.

Sponsoring

This event is intentionally being planed on a small budget to allow wide participation. We'd love to hear from you in case you would:

- ☁ provide a meal (two breakfasts, two lunches, one barbecue)
- ☁ sponsor a social event (one party, bar event on the Friday preceding the camp)
- ☁ help out with travel arrangements and accommodations for speakers
- ☁ provide material assistance (chair rental, refreshments, hosting ...)
